COACHES Q&A

WITH DAN & ADAM

ADAM FOR YOU, NEW LOOK SQUAD HEADING INTO ROUND ONE, WHO ARE SOME OF THE FACES WE SHOULD BE LOOKING OUT FOR?

Yeah I think we have 11 debutants if all get on but we're excited for all those girls to wear the jersey for the first time, and with our returning players, we're sure they'll do us proud.

There's a couple who have stood out over preseason. Ella Ryan obviously, she slots into flyhalf and at such a young age she's impressed massively. Zali as well, another who's been excellent in preseason and the trials. She's got huge shoes to fill with Tayla Stanford missing out, and we hope to see Tayla back soon but yeah, so excited to see how they go in their first game.

DAN, HOW HAS PREPARATION BEEN THIS WEEK AFTER A GREAT START TO THE SEASON?

Another great week's prep. Tough game against the Rebels last Friday so just managed that, focusing on our recovery and review but Tuesday we were back to it and had a big session which kickstarted the prep. Mostly business as usual, everything we've done has been with the knowledge we've got to shift up the gears a bit this week.

REFLECTING ON LAST WEEK AGAINST THE REBELS DAN, WERE YOU HAPPY WITH THE PERFORMANCE?

There was definitely lots of good things. I though the boy's execution of our game plan first half was really good. Definitely a lot of pleasing aspects with the performance but there parts that we need to get better, areas we're traditionality strong in and hold ourselves to a very high standard. So yeah, happy with the start and with the results obviously but certainly not comfortable and not getting ahead of ourselves and know we have to continue to improve.

WHAT ABOUT THE HIGHLANDERS, THEY'VE LOST A FEW BIG NAMES, WHAT ARE YOU EXPECTING FROM THEM?

Yeah they've lost a few but there's still a lot of quality in that side. Look at Aaron Smith, still absolutely one of the best players in the game. They've got some quality young backs, Hunt at Flyhalf and loane outside him. Rob Thomson at 13 another. So they'll present a different challenge I'm sure, plenty of kicking, not kicking the ball away but actual kicking to attack. They'll defend a little differently as well but yeah, a different challenge we're excited about.

ADAM, BRUMBIES HAVE GOT OFF TO A GREAT START IN SUPER RUGBY, HOW IMPORTANT IS IT FOR YOUR SIDE TO EMULATE THAT?

It's so important, especially with us only having two cracks at home every win counts and job number one for us is getting into that top three. We were proud of our finish last year, but this season we're putting that higher expectation on ourselves and we hope to go at least one further and make that Grand-Final.

MATCH PREVIEW: HIGHLANDERS

THE BIG PICTURE

Three in a row, that's what's at stake as the Plus500 Brumbies take on the Highlanders, hoping to execute a perfect home start to the 2020 season.

It's been a tough start to the new era at the Highlanders. A truncated preseason, a round one bye plus the loss of some key stars has put Aaron Mauger's side under the pump from the start.

However, Quality is still in healthy stock at the Highlanders. Up front, names like Liam Coltman and James Lentjes might not roll off the tongue, but they are quality operators, and, in the backs, Aaron Smith remains one of the best players in the world.

Last week, against somewhat of a bogey team for the Brumbies, represented growth, a comprehensive victory where performance matched result.

Tonight, the Brumbies will be hoping to match that level, and go even further, adding an exclamation point to what has been a lightning fast start to 2020.

SPOTLIGHT: POWELL V SMITH

The battle of the halfbacks could be crucial tonight, as two of the competitions best in Joe Powell and Aaron Smith face off.

Powell has had tremendous start to the season, providing quality service to Noah Lolesio as the young playmaker makes his first foray into professional rugby.

His link play in particular was outstanding in round two, Powell popping up a couple times in the loose to keep the Brumbies play going.

Not least for Solomone Kata's try where Powell was first to react to Pete Samu's surprise break, allowing the Brumbies attack to flourish.

Smith is one of the most renowned link players in the history of the game, and in a night where converting opportunities could be crucial, both will have their say in who comes out on top.

SUPER W: BRUMBIES ON A MISSION IN 2020

Following months of preparation, long nights after hard days at work, tonight the Brumbies get their Super W campaign underway against Rugby WA.

The mission this season is clear, go one better and make the Grand-final. It's been the only message coming out of Super W camp this season, players and staff not shying away from challenging themselves for more.

In previous seasons the Brumbies have narrowly missed out on playing in the grand final, finishing in fourth place in 2018 and third place in 2019.

Although inspired by those past seasons, it will be a new group who takes to the field this evening, led by two exceptional young stars, both having been here since the start.

If Jane Garraway and Michaela Leonard don't represent success for the Brumbies, what could? In 2018, both were inexperienced but were thrust into starting roles straight away.

Now, in year three they will co-captain the Brumbies side. It's a remarkable story, and one which will hopefully inspire a generation of players coming through and in truth, it already has.

Leonard will pack down at lock alongside Emily Sogal, forming a dynamic looking second-row duo. Closer to the front of the scrum, Krystal Fyfe makes her Brumbies debut alongside Harriet Elleman and Lousie Burrows.

Emma Masi and the experienced Rebecca Smyth start in the backrow alongside the talented Zali Waihape-Andrews.

Zali is one of a number of quality products coming through the ranks at the Brumbies, with youngsters Ella Ryan, Grace Kemp and Ainsley Scrivener. All three are finishing up their schooling this year and are dedicated to rugby.

Ryan would have almost certainly made her Super W debut last year if it weren't for her age. A star already at 17, Ryan excelled for UC in the Uni 7s and also earned national honours in the code in 2019.

Now Ryan turns her attention to 15's, partnering co-captain Jane Garraway in the halves, while out wide, speed-demons Darcy Read and Gabrielle Petersen on debut will look to play off centre pairing Sammie Wood and Pesi Palu.

Talei Wilson completes the run-on side, returning to the squad this season after missing out in 2019 due to injury.

Tania Afamasaga, Peta Cox and Iris Verebalavu are the front row replacements, while Grace Sullivan and Pearl Rakete complete the forwards replacements.

Phoebe Loughhead and Claudia Obst will provide firepower off the bench in the backs.

Buildcorp

"Rory Scott was outstanding I thought, Lachie Albert as well.

The work behind the scenes at the Brumbies Academy was on full display last Saturday, as current fledgling Brumbies and graduates alike shone against the Melbourne Rebels.

Starting off with the Runners, a host of underage talent took to the field in the curtain raiser and were outstanding against the Rebels A', posting a dominant win.

Brumbies Academy Head Coach was rapt with his side's effort.

"The boys did really well," Hooper said.

"You want to see them stand up physically, and just play their game and I thought they did that.

"Guys at this age do a lot of training, and they all impress but generally I just thought it was good to get that test against professional guys to see how they stand up."

Hooper has seen many Academy stars graduate to the Brumbies Super Rugby squad in the past few seasons and was proud to see them excelling at the pro level, none less so than flyhalf Noah Lolesio, who was outstanding again for the Brumbies in just his second ever Super Rugby appearance.

"It's nice validation for the program," Hooper explained.

"Obviously we're only a part of (Noah's) development, a lot of people have played their part in getting him to where he is now, most of all him and his family.

“The integration between the academy and the main squad is something we’re definitely proud of.

“Noah’s spent plenty of time with the academy in the early days, but also was able to be with the main squad as well.

“The advantage of having both is, when he’s with the main squad, he’s learning to be a professional and going through that, apprenticeship so to speak but when he’s with the academy, we can focus on him or any young player more closely and give them that one on one coaching.”

BRAIDWOOD 7S

The rugby 7s event hosted by the Braidwood Redbacks and the ACT Brumbies was a dream come true, as 44 teams and thousands of supporters descended on the small-town last Saturday.

After the cancellation of the Braidwood Cup due to drought conditions, the community came up with the idea to host a rugby 7s competition and carnival, with no expectation of the support they would receive.

The manager of the Braidwood Redbacks Nick Pengelly said that after they opened the registration for the event it took off and never slowed down.

The competition received so much interest and support from different teams that organisers had to close registration way before the event, as they had reached max capacity of teams and were still receiving registrations.

"Suddenly there's all these teams over New South Wales and from Sydney, from Canberra, Illawarra. We've got 44 teams here." Pengelly said.

Not only did the town receive support from local and interstate teams, but from thousands of people from Canberra and surrounding towns.

"Heaps of Canberra people have come down to shop and help support the locals. In this rugby here today, what a turn out. I've never seen so many people at the rec ground. I've come and watched them play rugby, the redbacks, on a Saturday sometimes and you might have 50 to 100 people but there's thousands of people here today." said a local from Braidwood.

The people of Braidwood hope that this event revitalises the town after the horrors they have faced from the recent bushfires.

The Brumbies saw some familiar faces out on the field during the competition, as former Brumbies Ben Alexander, Andrew Smith and many more all laced up their boots to do their part.

As well as the amazing turn out of supporters, Braidwood received some much-needed rain that only added to the magic of the day.

Brumbies prop Scott Sio knew just how much the rain meant to the people of Braidwood and to the country overall.

“It’s good to see a lot of rain. I know a lot of people have been praying for rain and it’s what the country needs at the moment so. It’s kind of fitting that it’s raining as well today during the sevens.” Sio said.

The Brumbies were nothing but excited about the day, with Sio saying that it’s amazing to see all the different communities coming together to get behind the event.

As the curtains closed on the competition and after many rounds of rugby had been played it would be West Harbour who took the win over Queanbeyan 12-5 in the men’s final and Jindabyne who defeated the Wests in the women’s final 17-7.

Soon after the final whistles many headed off for a nice cold drink and went to watch the yabbie race to cap off the day the right way.

Both the Brumbies and the Redbacks hope that the success of this 7s event will help put Braidwood back on the right track, for the town and the people within it.

#TEAMREHAB

The Brumbies are two from two in 2020, posting a pair of quality wins over Australian rivals the Reds and Rebels in the last two weeks, but as is always the case with local derbies, the physicality has meant some will be forced to sit out tonight's clash with the Highlanders.

Starting with the positives however, Darcy Swain has been passed fit for round three after missing last week. Scott Sio also is ready to go for round three but will act as a finisher, James Slipper being promoted to the run on side.

Tom Cusack however was unable to complete return to play protocol this week so is unavailable for selection. Will Miller swaps in for Cusack with Locky McCaffrey coming on to the bench. We wish Tom a speedy recovery and look forward to his return soon.
